FOR THE ARTS, HUMANITIES, RECREATION,
EDUCATION AND ECOLOGY.

THE CHALLENGE IS ON!

The At-Fort-Mason Capital Campaign is a fund-raising effort to complete ten major renovations projects within the historic piers and buildings of Fort Mason Center. To date, $3 million of the 1986 goal of $4 million has been raised.

The Kresge Foundation of Michigan has announced a $300,000 Challenge Grant to Fort Mason, to assist in the development of the 400-seat Bayfront Theater in Pier 2.

"This is an important gift for the Capital Campaign," said Executive Director Marc Kasky. "The Kresge Foundation reviews proposals from all over the nation and the world, and has made only 122 grants so far this year. This is an excellent vote of confidence for the Campaign from a respected foundation, and it will help us to reach out locally for additional support."

To receive the grant, Fort Mason must raise the remaining $939,230 of the total $1.7 million cost of the theater by July 1987. A broad-based public campaign has just been launched to meet the challenge. It is directed by an 18-member Campaign Committee, with Mayor Dianne Feinstein as Honorary Chair, and Myron Du Bain and Jerrold L. Kingsley serving as Co-Chairs.

Prior to the Kresge grant, Fort Mason received a $500,000 pledge for the Bayfront Theater from the S. H. Cowell Foundation of San Francisco. This pledge paved the way for Fort Mason to make the challenge proposal to The Kresge Foundation, and to plan the public campaign now underway.

"The Theater is clearly one of the Campaign's most exciting projects," said Kasky. "We have had tremendous response from potential users of the theater, including the San Francisco Film Festival, the City Celebration Ethnic Dance Festival, City Arts and Lectures, and Fort Mason residents such as Magic Theatre."

Pier 2 site for the Bayfront Theater.

The Theater will be a multipurpose facility, designed to serve nonprofit performers and presenters with an affordable mid-sized space for professional productions. It will be located in the outer end of Fort Mason's Pier 2, and will feature a spacious lobby with panoramic views of San Francisco Bay.

The Bayfront Theater is just one of many Capital Campaign projects described in previous issues of the Calendar. For more information, call 441-3400.

FMC UPDATE

In this second part of our spotlight on Fort Mason Center's facilities staff, we introduce the night crew. These are the staff members who are here five nights a week and every weekend, 365 days a year, to serve the needs of the public. It is through their efforts that Fort Mason is able to play host to thousands of events, seven days a week, sixteen hours a day, throughout the year.

Alfred Hernandez has worked at Fort Mason for two years. He is here every weekend and two nights a week. "Fort Mason feels like home. There's a lot of humor here that keeps you smiling." In his off-hours, Alfred is happiest when he's riding his customized Harley-Davidson motorcycle.

Elane Turner was a volunteer "signing" interpreter before coming to Fort Mason one year ago. "At Fort Mason you see such a variety of people... everyone from bag ladies to bank presidents." Elane loves the arts, especially poetry and painting, and is also a judo expert.

Reynaldo Casco works five nights a week on the 4 to midnight shift. He has also been on the maintenance crew for over a year, and enjoys the challenge it offers. When not at work, Rey likes to divide his hours between spending time with his family and fishing.

Ted Snow has the honor of being the newest member of the facilities staff. He likes working at Fort Mason "because of the location and the varied duties that make the job interesting." Ted works on the day crew as well as the weekend crew.

Whether you are coming to Fort Mason to enjoy the evening events, or putting on your own event or class, these staff members are your support crew. Working behind the scenes, they keep everything running smoothly and efficiently by providing information, equipment and assistance.

SUE WALDEN THEATER GAMES

im-pro-vised (im pre viz') 1. to extemporize; to compose, or simultaneously compose and perform on the spur of the moment and without any preparation 2. to make, provide or do with the tools and materials at hand.

Have you ever wanted to take a theater class but been afraid that perhaps you weren't "creative" enough? Does the thought of getting up in front of a group of people and "being spontaneous" make you break out in a cold sweat? Here's your chance to be both creative and spontaneous in a supportive and non-competitive atmosphere.

Sue Walden has been giving classes in improvisational theater at Fort Mason for seven years. The classes are based on the theater games of Viola Spolin and are geared for all levels of experience, from the complete beginner to the advanced actor. All that's necessary is the willingness to take a risk and discover your natural, playful instincts. It's a simple formula that, when applied to a framework of trust and cooperation, produces amazing results. In fact, these classes can become so addictive that many people of all ages take them over and over again.

The beginning classes are Spontaneity Techniques I and II, presenting warm-up exercises and basic theater games. You can then go on to Improvising Scenes I and II and Improvising Characters I and II, to explore more advanced performance techniques for creating characters, locations, and relationships. The series is flexible—depending on your experience, you can enter at any level. You can also re-take classes and always be assured of finding something new. Sue is constantly changing the content as she finds new games and exercises. There are also special classes, like Improvising

With Music and Body Spontaneous (based on the Alexander Technique) which are offered frequently.

If you still feel a little nervous about taking the plunge, there are Open Workshops, where you can experience a sampling of exercises and theater games in an informal atmosphere. And if you really want to get inspired, come to see Sue perform with her improv group, called Flash Family, the next time they appear at Fort Mason Center.

For more information on these classes, call Sue Walden at 885-5678.
